An `_raster_` is a digital picture that's created using a raster image editor. A `_vector_` is a digital picture that's created using a vector image editor. Photoshop is a raster image editor. Illustrator is a vector image editor. When it comes to image files, there are two kinds of files that define the format of an image: raster and vector. Those terms are often used interchangeably, but they represent two very different kinds of files. With the same digital image, you can create the same raster image but have it represented in two different ways. ## Differentiating Raster and Vector Images When you create a digital picture in Photoshop, Illustrator, or another image-editing software, you have a choice between creating a raster or vector image. Both forms of the file are common formats for saving images. A raster image is a `_bitmap_` that's represented as a grid of pixels. The pixels are arranged in a linear way and can be altered to change the color of specific areas of the image. For example, say you wanted to change the color of a rectangular area on an image to a solid color. (See Chapter 5 for information on color management and using the Correct Color dialog box.) You could change just that area and use the Override menu to use a solid color instead of the solid color you assigned to that specific area

'Batman V Superman: Dawn of Justice' is now the highest grossing movie at the box office on the DC Comics movie franchise. The movie earned $166 million over the weekend, adding up to a worldwide box office total of $322.8 million. By the time you read this, it will already be Monday and you'll be sporting another weird movie memorabilia from one of the weekend's biggest blockbusters. The new Batman, Ben Affleck, was outfitted by stylist Dawn Ostroff for the movie. But she decided to take the custom suit and run with it. "I was so inspired by the suit that I got him to wear on the red carpet, and it just felt like it needed a bigger spotlight than just the red carpet," Ostroff told ABC News. "I was having so much fun and said, 'Put a cape on the suit and turn it into a superhero suit.' It was like, 'What about a cape? Why not?'" she said. The cape is now selling for $16,000 in a costume store in Boston. It's one of 11 custom costumes Ostroff has created for films including "Batman v Superman."When multiple telephone companies are required to share an expensive telephone subscriber line, the subscribers must be assigned to particular lines based upon the use to which the line is to be put. In the past the telephone companies have manually re-assigned subscribers to different lines. This required a company representative to physically tap into the various telephone lines to determine which subscribers should be assigned to a particular line. If the telephone line was a trunks line, the company representative would have to physically access the line to tap in the termination system. The company representative would then manually read the code and determine which new subscribers to assign to which new line. This is quite inconvenient and time consuming. There is a need for a system which will automatically assign subscribers to available lines.For many years, electronics modules and their interconnection interfaces have been developed, with each product using the available technologies to provide its performance. These technologies have improved the basic performance of each electronic product as well as the number of circuits that can be fabricated in a given product footprint. The manufacturers of these products are constantly striving to improve the performance of their modules as well as their interconnections. Many interconnection technologies have been developed over the years. Many of these technologies are not compatible, making it difficult to interconnect different products. The majority of

This tutorial shows you how to bring out an old photograph's life through selective color. This was a difficult project, as it required small, proper adjustments to let you know where you might go wrong. Step 1 Open the photo. I opened the original file, but you can use Photoshop's file browser as well. Step 2 Use the Zoom tool (Z) to zoom in on the photograph. Find the areas you want to "color".
